McGraw Hill is pleased to announce that we are moving to a new Enterprise Resource Planning System (ERP) mid-April!

While most of this transformation will be internal, there will be some changes to how you do business with McGraw Hill (MH). The most impactful of these changes is our move to Oracle's Supplier Portal, along with a shift away from SAP's Ariba Network.

Oracle's Supplier Portal is an online application that gives users full control over their data and provides a direct line of communication to the MH team. This new platform will be available to all suppliers and authors and offers numerous benefits, such as self-registration and maintenance, an invoice and payment status inquiry tool, 24/7 system availability, and best of all, it's free to use.

What's Next?

To make sure this process is as smooth as possible, MH will impose a blackout period for all purchase order creation, invoice processing, payment issuance, and supplier maintenance activities. Please make note of the following important dates:

Last day to submit invoices for processing	March 21, 2023
Last day MH will create/amend Ariba PO's (US)	March 22, 2023
MH to disable Ariba Network	March 24, 2023
Last day MH will issue payments (from current ERP)	March 29, 2023

*Normal business activity to resume mid-April in Oracle SaaS.

Additional Information

We will be taking a phased approach to the Supplier Portal rollout. At the appropriate time, you will receive instructions via email on how to create, and register an account, accompanied by training materials to ensure a seamless transition.

To stay current on the progress of this project, be sure to bookmark the McGraw Hill Supplier page (https://www.mheducation.com/suppliers). The website will continue to be updated as MH prepares for go live.
